Happenings of Interest in and Around This Bustling Town. You Are Talked About

We shall thank our readers for all items of interest which they may be able to furnish us for publication. Phone 64-A. P.O. Box 75

May opened fine. Now for lots of water.

Coleman real estate has gone up in price.

The new Joyce building is being rapidly put up.

Harry Clayton was down from Fernie this week.

Dr. Lovering returned to Lethbridge on Tuesday.

The season for the "whites" is now here in real earnest.

Fine weather. Farmers happily awaiting large crops.

Alex. Cameron and H. A. Parks were visiting friends at Frank, on Sunday last.

J. B. Wilkie, of the Royal Collieries, Lethbridge, came up to Coleman on Monday.

James A. Close, father of our new school teacher, was in town this week returning to Woodstock, Ont.

Dr. V. E. Barrow, the provincial health inspector, was down here from Edmonton on Wednesday.

Mrs. Westwood and daughter Beatrice were at Michel on Monday, the guests of Dr. and Mrs. McSorley.

W. J. Sanvidge and E. Disney are having several poles erected on second street, so as to connect their offices by telephone.

J. W. Powell, the I. C. & C. Co's. mine manager and superintendent, went to Michel and places farther west this week.

Reports received from Fernie say that Monday night's wind did considerable damage there. Many plate glass windows were broken.

O. E. S. Whiteside attended a meeting of the coal operators at Macleod on Tuesday. He went to Macleod again on yesterday's mail.

Miss Iva Close, the new addition to our day school teaching staff, arrived in town from Woodstock, Ontario, on Saturday morning last.

Now for fish stories. This town is well-equipped with fishing tackle, this can be proven by just a glance at D. J. Hill, the hardware man's windows.

The hot sun is causing the snow to disappear so rapidly from the hills near here that an overflow of water, causing delayed railway traffic may be looked for.

BORN.—On April 30, a son to Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Kane. On Thursday, a son to Mr. and Mrs. Aluzon. On 4th inst., a son Mr. and Mrs. George Romanok.

"And the wind she blew a hurricane, and the wind she blew some more" is said to have been repeated by one of our residents on Monday night last, in his sleep. Who would question the veracity of this statement.

George E. Ewing, who was formerly manager of a branch of the Eastern Townships bank here but who is now managing a branch of the same bank at Taber, came up to Coleman on Saturday evening, returning to Taber on the following evening.

TWO TRAGEDIES AT NELSON

The Nelson Daily News of Wednesday last, contained the following account of two tragedies that marred Arbor day:—The celebration of Arbor day yesterday was marred by two tragedies. The first took place just before noon when Wallace E. Millgren, who had been working on some excavation on Ward street, was entombed by a caving in of soil and killed, while the second was the discovery of a corpse of James W. Cole who, during an attack of temporary insanity, had shot himself.

About 11.15 W. J. Boyle, walking across Ward street where it joins Baker street, heard a rumble of falling earth followed by cries and groans. Looking up Ward street he saw that W. E. Smith, who had been employed by Smith & Hudson excavating a trench for sewer pipes in connection with the new block, which is being built for Green Bros. & Burden, was signalling for help. Rushing up the street Mr. Boyle found that Wallace E. Millgren, who had also been digging out the earth, had been completely entombed by a sudden caving in of soil. A number of willing helpers, namely, Mr. Boyle, A. Irwin, W. E. Smith and Harry Wingfield, commenced to dig out the unfortunate man. They had been at work about ten minutes when, owing to the pressure on the ground above caused by the gathering of a large crowd of persons, a second cave-in occurred. At this time the workers had just succeeded in clearing sufficient soil to allow Mr. Millgren to breathe and to speak to his would-be rescuers. The second slide, however, not only covered Mr. Smith & Wingfield up to their shoulders. The former when taken out was found by Dr. Rose to have sustained a broken rib and arm and certain internal injuries which up to a late hour last night had not been defined, and the latter was severely bruised about the neck, shoulders and arms and suffered considerably from shock. This second falling in also made the rescue of Mr. Millgren practically impossible. After a great deal of digging, in which D. McDonald, A. Stubbs, A. Corbett, Mr. Boyle, A. Irwin, assisted by N. J. Cavanaugh and T. G. Proctor took part, and the dead man was found standing up at 12.35. The trench was about 14 feet in depth.

An inquest, over which coroner W. O. Rose will preside, will be held today. The second case was that of James S. Cole, a C. P. R. brakeman, who had been missing since noon on Monday, was yesterday found dead from a gunshot wound through his head. The body was located at a spot about half a mile southeast of the smelter and the shack in which he had lived. It was partially hidden in some brush and lying close beside it was a 12-bore single barrel gun, a shot from which had undoubtedly been the cause of his death.

WILL SPEAK ON IRRIGATION
Spokane, Wash., May 6.—Sir Thomas G. Shaughnessy, president of the Canadian Pacific Railway company, writes from Montreal to R. Insinger, chairman of the board of control of the National Irrigation congress, that while it may not be possible for him to attend the seventeenth session of that organization in Spokane, August 9 to 14, the company will be represented. J. S. Dennis, assistant to the second vice president and superintendent of the company's irrigation works, will be among the speakers, taking as his subject "Irrigation in Canada."

Sir Thomas expressed interest in the problems of irrigation, drainage, forestry, deep waterways, good roads and home building to be discussed, and regretted he may not be able to be present during the sessions. He intimated, however, that the congress will not be disappointed in Mr. Dennis as a representative, adding: "He has more complete detailed information about what we are doing and what we contemplate doing than anyone else."

Mr. Insinger announced that the provinces of British Columbia, Alberta and Saskatchewan will send large delegations, also that it is expected to have representatives from Manitoba, Ontario, Quebec, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia, adding:

"There is much interest in irrigation in western Canada, and I know the people in the eastern provinces are vitally concerned in forestry, waterways, reclamation plans, good roads and home building. The movement to settle the eastern provinces, evidence of this, and we shall look for delegates from those parts of the Dominion."

THE ANNUAL MEETING

Of Coleman Board of Trade—Officers Elected—Wagon Road Badly Needed.

The annual meeting of the Coleman board of trade took place on Monday night last. The members present were, W. L. Ouimette, acting president; H. A. Parks, secretary; Alex. Cameron, L. A. Manly, H. Gate, D. A. Simpson, A. I. Blais, Alex. Morrison, T. W. Davies and J. F. Povah. The minutes of last meeting were read and adopted.

The president informed the board that since last meeting the committee which were appointed to make provisions to entertain delegates from boards of trade and village councils between Coleman and Macleod at a joint meeting held here on April 21st, did their work in a very commendable manner. The meeting was well attended by men who seemed to be very enthusiastic in the upbuilding of this district.

Communications relative to the double mail service were received from the deputy postmaster general and also from many of the boards of trade along the Pass and read by the secretary.

L. A. Manly thought it advisable for some of the members of the board to express their opinion as to the prospective results of the big meeting held here about two weeks ago at which the Prairie and Pass Promotion League was formed. There was a large response to this and many were the excellent remarks made. H. Gate said that this district would derive an immense benefit from the meeting. While on his feet he also referred to the proposed much-needed wagon road to connect the prairie with B. C. He thought that if the Alberta government were aware of the immense outlay, by the British Columbia government, to complete the wagon road from the coast to the "Cow" Nest, B. C., the former would rush to meet them. The need of this wagon road along the Pass was becoming more and more apparent everyday.

Alex. Morrison, seconded, said the meeting referred to was the beginning of large things and hoped that the expectations of all interested would be readily realized.

T. W. Davies had much faith in the Prairie and Pass Promotion League and felt sure of large results. He proposed a vote of thanks to the committee whose untiring efforts helped to make the joint meeting such a success.

A. I. Blais said that the previous speakers had voiced his sentiments. He thought that the meeting was held at the very best time, a very opportune time. It was well known that Coleman was in need of more railroad facilities. He had much pleasure in seconding Mr. Davies' motion.

Alex. Cameron said that the results of the meeting would be far-reaching. This being the annual meeting an election of officers was called for. Mr. Cameron said that as the acting president had filled the position very efficiently during the past three or four months he had very much pleasure in proposing him to the position of president, and W. L. Ouimette was elected president. The following officers were then elected: J. F. Povah, 1st vice-president; D. J. Hill, 2nd vice-president; H. A. Parks, secretary, re-elected; and Alex. Cameron was re-elected treasurer.

A committee of three consisting of L. A. Manly, D. A. Simpson and Alex. Morrison, were appointed to work in conjunction with the officers as an advisory board.

COWLEY'S BIG DAY

Cowley have long been noted as a place of good sport, especially on the 24th of May. This 24th of May promises to surpass all previous ones for Cowley. Foot racing, horse racing, football, baseball, polo, boxing and wrestling matches etc. will be indulged in. Four silver cups and five hundred dollars in prizes will be contested for. Reduced passage rates will be given on the C. P. R. We believe that a large contingent of Coleman sport lovers will avail themselves of the opportunity to enjoy themselves on Victoria day, by taking in the sports at Cowley.

THE END BELIEVED TO BE NEARING

A mass meeting of district 18 of United Mine Workers of America will be held at Frank Sunday afternoon, to discuss the strike situation. The meeting will be addressed by president Sherman, vice-president Evans, Honore Jaxon, C. Stubbs and International representatives Rogers and Morgan.

Vice-president Evans, who was in Coleman, Thursday, when seen by a MINER representative stated that he thought the operators and miners would soon come together and settle their trouble. Mr. Evans also stated that he expected a conciliation board would meet at Macleod next week if in the meantime the strike was not settled.

The meeting at Frank is expected to be a very large one and will be open to all who wish to attend.

O. E. S. Whiteside, general manager of the I. C. & C. Co., who returned from Macleod this morning, says that the operators have stated their claims to the dominion government and that both the operators and miners have asked for the appointment of a conciliation board under the Lemieux act. This board will probably sit within the next five days.

Additional Coleman Locals

Inspector M. J. Her, of the R. C. M. P., visited Coleman on Wednesday.

J. E. Wright, of Ouimette, Wright & Co., returned from a business trip to Calgary and Red Deer.

The gentlemen of Coleman will give an informal dance in the opera house, here, tonight. A large crowd and a good time are expected.

On Tuesday evening last the Independent Order of Odd Fellows had an "at home" in their hall and presented their noble grand, Harry Clayton, who has lately taken up his residence in Fernie, with a gold locket.

The new time table of the Canadian Pacific railway went into effect on Sunday last and reads as follows for Coleman:

Local, westbound	17.32
" eastbound	11.35
Passenger, westbound	7.53
" eastbound	20.57
Spokane Flyer, westbound	8.48
" eastbound	22.35

A very pleasant evening was spent by many at the home of

MINERS ARE DISSATISFIED

With Attitude of Board Member Morgan—Miners Not Receiving Any Financial Help

Fernie, B. C., May 4.—That a meeting of the District Board of the U. M. W. of A. will be held here not later than Thursday, to bring about another meeting with the operators for the purpose of reconsidering the preamble to the agreement arrived at in the first meeting in Macleod, is now assured. Whether the operators will consider anything outside the lines agreed upon then is uncertain, as that body has taken the stand that an agreement was arrived at and accepted in the regular way, but that the miners afterwards went back upon this agreement. They are also of the opinion that to give in now, after the miners had once arrived at an agreement and then repudiated it, would vitiate any agreement arrived at in future negotiations, and make any such proceedings farcical.

The district officers are still dissatisfied with the attitude taken by the International board, and District Vice-President Evans is reported to have said that the main inside trouble is with Morgan and the International, and that it is in order to satisfy the demands made by these parties to go back to the Macleod proposals, that the Unions will take another vote on the question.

Evans is of the opinion, however, that the Unions will stand by the union principle at stake.

Morgan comes in for some very harsh criticism from Evans, who practically accuses him of supporting the operators to the detriment of the unions.

Under present conditions the striking miners cannot receive any financial assistance from the International organization, and Morgan has notified them that if there is no agreement reached on the Macleod basis, he cannot advise the International board to come to their aid. This, the men take as a threat to compel them to come to time, and a great deal of indignation is felt at the attitude taken by the International officials.

Another feature which points to an early conference is the return to Fernie of several operators who have been absent for some time.

W. H. Rogers, International board member for Iowa, is also in the city, having been sent here by the International headquarters officials.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Jones, on Thursday last week. The leading game being progressive whist, 4 tables being used; the winners being Mrs. Jones and Mrs. C. Dunlop. Crib and other games were also played. At midnight a very tasty lunch was served by the hostess. After lunch dancing was commenced and kept up until the small hours of the morning when all joined hands and sang "Auld Lang Syne." All present hoped that it would not be long before Mrs. Jones will give another such pleasant event.

Coleman, Friday, May 7, 1909

WILL HAVE A HIGH SCHOOL

Coleman's progressive strides can be well judged by the rapid increase of scholars attending our day schools here. Five years ago Coleman had a day school teacher for the first time. Now we have four teachers; before we see the end of the present year Coleman will have a school house valued at about $20,000.

In addition to this it is proposed to have a high school here so that advanced scholars living in this district, may be able to complete their education at Coleman instead of going elsewhere to do so. This, we believe, will be good news to many living in the nearby towns as well as to those living in Coleman.

We can easily see Coleman becoming the great educational centre as well as the great coal mining centre, of Sunny Southern Alberta.

Rome was not built in a day, neither can we reasonably expect the establishing of a high school here to be perfected in two or three months hence. But as Coleman has risen to such an important place in the west, while but yet in its infancy, the erection of a high school, if not a college, seems very probable to take place inside of twelve months hence.

EXPLOSION IS THREATENED

The following from the Winnipeg Tribune, the only independent journal in Western Canada, is well worth reproducing. The Tribune has thought for some time that this explosion must come and come soon, and it earnestly hopes that the time is near at hand when the unscrupulous politicians will either be peeping through the window or enjoying the company of the poisonous reptiles of Mexico. Canada has no room for grafters.

An explosion is threatened at Ottawa that will shake political Canada from one end to the other. The rank and file of the Government following is becoming restive under the policy of the ministry, a policy of covering up the tracks of miscreants in high places.

Every day it is becoming more difficult to get the buck brushers to stand up in defence of wrongdoing, and Sir Wilfrid is beginning to realize the danger of an actual stampede from the Government ranks.

Henceforth increases in indemnity, jobs of one kind and another, the chance to get in on the plunder of the public domain, have kept in line many of the brainy, but unscrupulous leaders, who have held forth on the disaster cry among the men in the ranks if there should be any break, any weakening even in the face of the most damning arraignment of some of the public acts of the Government and the conduct of certain of the ministers.

Several of the new members of the House and not a few of the old ones are amazed at the accumulation of wealth by some of the party bosses. At least one of the latter has amassed millions since he entered politics and today lives in the style of an Indian potentate. It is in everybody's mouth: "Where did he get it?" Men who came to Ottawa a few years ago worth two or three thousand are rated today at fifty, one hundred, and two hundred thousand, and the only visible means of support has been their indemnity, but more than incidentally their connection with Government graft.

Orders have gone out from the Cabinet chambers for every member to sit tight on investigation. The experience with the Royal Commission and the Judge Cassels Commission has taught the bosses the danger of investigation. The independent press and public have been demanding the criminal prosecution of some or all of the indicted thieves, but the thieves hold the whip hand. They are not afraid. They defy the Government, because the latter is afraid that, in case of prosecution, there would be revealing, and men in high places might be directly and more effectively accused of sharing in the huge game of graft.

Sir Wilfrid's incompetency to preside over affairs and see that Canada's business is conducted honestly becomes more apparent every day. One of the new members who entered the House for the first time this year, told your correspondent this week, that he came to Ottawa under the impression that the Premier had great ability. "He's a pure bluff," he remarked today. "He gets off rather a clever speech once in a while, but he has absolutely no grasp of the general situation, and his intelligent followers feel that way."

If those who desire thorough investigation should drive the government into action, the prediction is freely made that Mexico's population may have a slight increase, and the names will not be unfamiliar to Canadian readers.

MICHEL VS. COLEMAN

On Saturday afternoon last the Coleman football club journeyed to Michel to meet the Michel team in a game of football. Sharp at 5 p. m. Michel set the ball rolling and the Coleman kickers immediately became aggressive but an "off side" stopped their headway and Michel gained considerably by the free kick. After this both sides played about even until half time was called, with neither side having scored.

On resuming the game each side made desperate efforts for the other fellows' goal and although Coleman came very near scoring several times, luck went against them and Penman scored for Michel. The game resulted one to nil in favor of the home team.

Coleman and Coal Creek players will play here tomorrow, (Saturday), where a good game will be witnessed.

BLAIRMORE HAPPENINGS

J. B. Reuter spent a few days in Lethbridge this week.

D. C. Drain left for Seattle, Wash., on Sunday for a month's visit.

Little Archie McLeod is suffering from an attack of pneumonia.

Joe Moreno is making good progress on the new side tracks to the mine.

H. S. Pelletier says he will be turning out bricks at his new works shortly.

Geo. P. Hinds and wife left for their home in Stillwater, Minn., Tuesday.

Joe Montalbetti who has been in the employ of Wright Bros.,
at Michel, returned to town
this week.

Spence Lewis left this week for Pincher Creek where he will train Rosalta for the coming season. Blairmore race track has not yet been repaired.

Keith McFarlane, an old timer in the Pass moved to Blairmore this week. He will occupy one of the Dougal houses near the mine in which he has secured employment.

The Mercantile have re-modelled their old store building which will be used by the manager of that company to wind up its affairs after the sale of the Blairmore store which is to take place in the course of a few days.

Gerald Cooke of this place and Robert S. Lake, of Calgary, have formed a partnership and will conduct a real estate business here. Both gentlemen are well known in the Pass. Mr.
Cooke will have charge of the business which assures the success of their real estate venture in this burg.

Archie McLeod and John George, a director of the Cement Co., have been doing a large business in cement stocks here this week. Nearly all of Blairmore's business men have taken stock in the Company.
When the home people see a good thing in the cement business the outside world need have no fear in buying up all they can get hold of.

99 ROUNDS

Chicago, May 5.—Batting Nelson and Larry Eichenster, manager for "Cyclone Johnny" Thompson, held a conference here last night with reference to Nelson's engagement.
The bout with Thompson has been set for July 5, in Colma, Cal. All the details have been arranged. The weight will be 135 pounds ringside. Nelson insisted on 99 rounds, and Eichenster agreed.

The lightweight championship
holder left for California last night.

KAISER'S BIG FLEET

Toronto, May 6.—Col. Denison last night, speaking to an empire meeting, said Germany was preparing for a great struggle without concealment.
Everywhere the Germans were forming naval leagues, which were clamoring for an overpowering fleet. The colonel argued small, scattered ships were useless and advocated Dreadnoughts. Canada should support 30 per cent. of the Dartmouth cadets and form a trained naval reserve of 10,000 men.

The western branch of the Canadian Mining Institute will hold their fifth general meeting at Coleman on Tuesday, 25th inst. A full attendance of members at this meeting is earnestly requested. Members are invited to contribute papers or notes for reading and dis-

BOARD OF TRADE RE-ORGANIZED

At Blairmore—Busy Meeting—
Side With Coleman Board
In Many Things

The re-organization of the Blair-more board of trade took place in the old school house, on Wednesday evening and resulted in the re-election of most of the provisional officers; the only changes being that George Bradley, sr., was elected vice-president in place of James Dougal, and F. E. Hinds was elected secretary in place of Milton Budd who stated that he would not be able to spare the time necessary to carry out the work satisfactorily. Mr. Budd also stated that he would gladly assist the Board in anyway possible in furthering the interests of the village and district.

The officers elected were: Hon.
president, C. L. Remeau; hon. 1st vice-president, F. T. Mercer; hon. 2nd vice-president, W. J. Budd; hon. 3rd vice-president, H. S. Pelletier; president, H. E. Lyon; vice-president, George Bradley, sr.; 2nd vice-president, J. B. Reuter; secretary, F. E.
Hinds; treasurer, A. B. Hames. The following advisory committee was also appointed: A. A. Sparks, A. Macleod, L. P. Robert, S. J. Sargeant, M.
Rosse, D. C. Drain, H. Howard, Rev.
James Sargeant and I. Loughhead.

The board transacted a great deal of business of interest to the town and district. H. E. Lyon, who was a delegate to the joint convention, at Coleman, spoke highly of the way in which the citizens of Coleman treated the delegates, and explained the reason for the formation of the Prairie and Pass Promotion League. Mr.
Lyon also laid before the board the resolutions passed at the Coleman joint conference relating to the need of railway competition and the building of a wagon road to the British Columbia line to connect with the one which is being constructed, and also point by the B. C. government. The board heartily endorsed the action of the delegates and the resolutions passed.

A communication from a Winnipeg firm, regarding water works, was referred to the village council.

Five dollars were voted towards assisting the Prairie and Pass Promotion League in their good work.

The board also endorsed the action of the Coleman board in asking for increased mail service, and a resolution will be forwarded immediately asking the postmaster general to provide better mail facilities by establishing an additional mail service on what are known as the "locals."

A strong resolution was carried asking the minister of public works of Alberta to take immediate steps to cribb that portion of the Old Man river about one mile west of the village thus preventing the destruction of the main wagon road as well as protecting private property.

A resolution asking the C. P. R. to provide better passenger, freight and platform accommodation, was passed.

Many other matters of interest to the village were discussed and will come up for further consideration at the next meeting.

The membership is now 27 with good prospects of more.

In closing the president expressed the hope that the few dissatisfied ones would quickly drop into line and that all would work together in the interests of the Pass in general and Blairmore in particular.

The formation of the board of trade fills a long felt want, and it is safe to say that the affairs of the village will be well looked after by the officers and members of this new and energetic organization.

ZION IN TROUBLE

Chicago, May 6.—Zion City, Dowie's former stronghold, has two mayors and two councils. The latter will sit up or try to sit, tonight at the same meeting place and E. R. Ritchie and W. H. Clendenning will both attempt to preside. The former polled the greater number of votes at the recent election but the latter is out with a signed statement that he expects to remain mayor for the coming year, and as he is backed by William Glen Vollra and the police force, violence may occur when the two factions meet.

HINDU REBEL METHODS

HOW SEDITION SPREADS AMONG THE NATIVES.

Story in Pall Mall Magazine Tells How Soldier Was Accused of Poisoning the Wells of the Village and Innocent Tommy Atkins Was Brutally Ill-treated—Arrival of Patrol Saved Him From Death.

The methods which, it is claimed in some quarters, are adopted by the millions of India against British rule are strikingly illustrated in a short story which appears in the current issue of The Pall Mall Magazine.

The situation which gives the writer the story is as follows: Private Jas. Smith has fallen out of the ranks in the course of some cavalry manoeuvres, and is struggling along with his lame horse in the hope of finding the camp. As a matter of fact, he is lost, and some time after dark he has fallen and reaches a native village.

On the same day a fakir, "filthy to an unpeakable degree," arrived in the village, and at the moment that Private Jas. Smith reached it was haranguing the natives on the wrongs of India. His hearers, standing and sitting around him in picturesque groups, dwelt upon his words and swallowed his statements eagerly. They saw themselves robbed of their little stock of hard-earned money by a Government of foreigners, and despoiled to make fat an unknown Lord-Sahib and a King who dwelt across the seas. Truth and lies rolled together, and in turn from his glib and polished tongue.

He demonstrated beyond refutation how famine had been introduced into the country with the sole view of stamping out the population. He showed how, not content with the progress of the scourge with which the Government had invented a certain thing called inoculation with the sole view of playing the people by more direct means.

But, he went on, that was not all, worse things were being done. When the Government saw that people were not deceived by their wicked trick of inoculation they began to do something yet more devilish. They sent out emissaries to—here, with an orator's instinct for effect, he paused—to poison the village wells.

It was at this moment that Private Jas. Smith stumbled into the village, and the fakir took instant advantage of the dramatic possibilities of the situation.

"Hush! Watch him, and see if he goes not to the well!" he whispered. Naturally that is exactly what Smith did. The bucket was lowered three times before his hand and that of his horse had been satisfied.

"There!" said the fakir, impressively. "I not tell you that Government sent forth men to tamper with the wells?" The result was that Private Jas. Smith was attacked and tied up, and then the fakir led him—by the way, to the well to prove that it had been poisoned.

Truly, this pseudo-fakir was a useful man to those who employed him. He was not one of the posturing demagogues who acquire merit and earn sanctity by measuring their length along the road to the posterity, when such to Bonaparte, or by some similarly foolish and impressive act. He was of another breed—a new breed that has sprung into existence, or perhaps has only renewed its existence, of recent years; a breed the members of which are sent from various countries to poison the minds of the country folk, to tell them the "real truth" about the Fenians and the aims of his race.

The bucket was again lowered. It was for the fakir to drop several little broad pills into it, and then it was raised.

Floating on the surface were half a dozen little objects that bobbed innocently in the ripples, and showed white in the light of the lantern. A roar broke from the crowd, and the water was poisoned—had been poisoned before their eyes by a soldier! There was the poison, and there was evidence irrefragable of the truth of statements they had been ready to believe professed.

Private Jas. Smith was dragged out and brutally ill-treated by the villagers and the fakir. The villagers wanted to make him drink the "poisonous" water, but the fakir was against this. Throw him down the well, was his advice. "The well is useless to you henceforth, for it is already full with poison. Therefore drop him in it."

Nor the fakir was only too eager that the village should be embroiled with the authorities; he knew that the villagers would be much too simple and too avaricious to sacrifice Private Smith's horse, for it would be of use to them. Consequently, the search was made for Private Smith, his horse would be found in or near the village. That, in its turn, would almost certainly lead to the dragging of the well and the fishing-up of a soldier's body. Then there would be the devil to pay, with the ultimate result that the village would really become angry and disaffected with Government. That would be so many men gained.

But Private Smith was not thrown down the well. He was rescued by a night patrol which happened on the village just in the nick of time.

The upshot was, firstly, that Private Smith was sent away for several days; secondly, that the village had quartered upon it a force of punitive police, to show them that soldiers must not be bound or drowned in that off-hand way; thirdly, that the fakir, who turned out to be a defaulter from a commercial office in Calcutta, was sent to the Andamans for ten years.

Up Against It

The suffragette leader was addressing a meeting of the Cooklady's and Chambermaids' union.

"You women should all have a voice in the affairs of the nation," she exclaimed. "You should be entitled to a vote."

Hereupon a seer, after information arose. The interruption was accompanied by a strong Hibernian accent. "Sure, that wud mean that we'd be after havin' to live in wan place for six months, wudn't it?" demanded the speaker.

It was not until then that the suffragette leader fully realized what she was up against.

Trial is Inexpensive.—To those who suffer from dyspepsia, indigestion, rheumatism or any ailment arising from derangement of the digestive system, a trial of Parmelee's Vegetable Pills is recommended, should the sufferer be acquainted with them. The trial will be inconspicuous and the result will be another customer for this excellent medicine. So effective is their action that many cures can certainly be traced to their use where other pills have proved ineffective.

"But you must come down to dinner with me."
"Really, old boy, you must excuse me; the doctor warns me that if I start to eat, I am liable to go to flesh and blood."

"I think not," responded the unhappy parent. "Otherwise you'd dry up now and then."

These Pills Cure Rheumatism.—To the many who suffer from rheumatism, a trial of Parmelee's Vegetable Pills is recommended. They have pronounced action upon the liver and kidneys and by regulating the action of these organs act as an alternative in preventing the admixture of uric acid and blood that causes this painful disorder. They must be taken according to directions and used steadily and they will speedily give evidence of their beneficial effects.

THE GIANT ANT EATER.

A Most Peculiar Creature That Is Found In Venezuela.

The giant ant eater of Venezuela is one of the most outlandish looking creatures in all the domain of nature. It is an animal about two and a half feet long and weighs about 150 lbs. Its body and head are covered together measure about seven feet in length. The tail is usually carried curved over the back, draping and shading the body. In appearance the bushy tail may be likened to a clump of ornamental grass. The head is very small, but it is prolonged into a snout a foot or more in length. The mouth is at the extremity of this snout.

The ant eaters belong to that group of the animal kingdom known as the edentates, a class usually toothless. If they have any teeth at all, they are very few in number, of a rudimentary or simple form, in the back of the head. They resemble in this respect birds, and they furthermore bear a resemblance to the bird creature in the possession of muscular, gizzard-like stomachs. One feature of the edentates is that they all have some peculiarity in the covering of the body. The armadillo, for instance, has a shagreened skin, and the sloth a series of shingle-like scales, the aardvark, native to the Transvaal, a pig-like skin, scantily covered with hair, and the ant eater, with its bushy tail and the body plentifully covered with hair.

The ant eater is in many ways unlike other animals. The most striking dissimilarity is in its mouth, which does not open and shut with an up and down movement of the lower jaw, as that of all other quadrupeds, but it is a mere aperture, opening only enough to admit of the passage of the foot long, whip-like tongue.

The favorite ant eater is fed on broad and mill. In its native haunts, the forests of South America, it feeds exclusively on termites, or, as they are popularly called, white ants. These termites abound in the wilds of tropical America, and the ant eater tears open with its sharp fore claws their conical mud nests and with its slender tongue licks up the inmates out of every nook and crevice.

The ant eater has a queer way of walking. It is the manner in which it uses its fore limbs. The claws of its fore limbs are so constructed that they are incapable of sustaining the weight of the body, but are turned backward, compelling the animal to stand and walk on the surface of its wrists. When it ambles around, awkwardly, as it appears, it seems to be using two amputated fore limbs.

One of the Immortal Arnolds.

Mr. Forster came of a family that simply could not help themselves in becoming famous. Son of William Delaford Arnold, director of Public Instruction in the Punjab, and nephew of such master minds as Dr. Arnold of Rugby, certainly the greatest poet and scholar of the English school masters, and Matthew Arnold, whose classic poetry will ever live in the annals of English literature, he cannot forget the sad and tragic descriptions of the "old unbeliever's" loss of Christ.

"But He is dead; He lies under His cross. In a far Syrian town; And in His grave With thinking gaze The Syrian starts to know."

The Acid Test.

She looked up at him.
"You love me, George," she said. "You have told me you would do anything to prove your love."

"Anything, dearest," he fervently muttered.

Her ready gaze did not waver.
"My new suit from Paris has come," she said, "together with my new hat and my new puffs. I will array myself in these and you will walk down the avenue with me to-morrow afternoon."

He turned pale and hesitated.
"This is the acid test of love," she coldly added.

He mutely shook his head as he said:
"I can't do it," he hoarsely gasped, and went away deeply sorrowing.

A MOTHER'S CHIEF CARE IS HER BABY'S WELFARE

Every mother is anxious that the little ones shall be healthy, good natured and bright. Every mother can keep her children in this condition if she will give them an occasional course of Baby's Own Tablets. These Tablets cure all stomach and bowels troubles, destroy worms and make teething easy. Mrs. T. Covert Mack writes: "Our little boy, who was used Baby's Own Tablets for my little boy since he was three months old, and find that they agree with him splendidly." Muscular Rheumatism Subdued.—When one is a sufferer from muscular rheumatism he cannot do better than to have the region rubbed with Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil. There is no oil that so speedily shows its effect in subduing pain. Let the rubbing be brisk and continue until case is settled. There is more virtue in a bottle of it than can be fully estimated.

When the Nerves get out of Tune

And nervous prostration or partial paralysis brings you to a bed of helplessness. You can remember the case described here and revitalize the wasted nerve system by using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

It is so easy to neglect derangements of the nerves until something serious happens. We say happens because many persons do not think they are really sick until they are laid low by nervous prostration, or some form of paralysis.

They overlook the headaches, the nervous indigestion, the irritability and nervousness, the loss of sleep and energy and ambition. They forget that for weeks or months life has been more or less of a drag.

Then when the nervous collapse comes it takes patient and persistent treatment to get you on your feet again. The nerve cells must be gradually built up and a little more sympathy added to the system each day than has been expended.

Get in the sunshine, breathe the fresh air, and use Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and you will get well. But you must be patient and persistent.

Mr. Wm. Graham, Atwood, Ont., writes:—"My wife had been ill for some time with nervous prostration and two of the best doctors we could get failed to help her. She gradually became worse and worse, could not sleep and lost energy and interest in life. She was giving up in despair when a friend advised a treatment of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

"From the first box of this preparation my wife used we noticed improvement and now she is completely cured and as well as ever she was, eats well, sleeps well and feels fully restored. I must add that she has not used a box of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food." 50c a box, 6 boxes for $2.50, at all dealers or Edmondson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

A GREAT RUNNER.

One of His Feats of Which He Had to Be Reminded.

"I'm the real thing as a runner," said Howard James majestically as he seated himself at the first home dinner of the season. And then when it came to selecting a president for the class I made the race. When the voting started I ran second, but at the last, well, I ran ahead of all the other candidates. There's no doubt about it, I'm a runner. Of course, when the baseball season opened the crowd wanted me to play for the team. About a fortnight ago I realized my superiority, but persuasion succeeded. I went on the team, and the way I ran was a positive shame. Then I went into the track meet. I ran ten yards in ten seconds, almost equalling the world's record. Yes; I am a runner. Then—"You ran into debt," interrupted Old Man James, with a distinctive grunt, "and I have to pay you out."

DARK DOINGS.

The Reason One Woman Is Disgusted With the Voting Proposition.

When any one asked little Mrs. Pratt her opinion on the question of equal suffrage she had her answer ready. "I don't want to hear anything about it," she would say pleasantly, but firmly. "I'd just as soon tell you why. It's because there's got to be a compromise between voting and not voting, and I like things open and aboveboard. It's the way I was brought up and the way I shall always feel if I live to be a hundred."

"I've had one experience, and that's all I want. A friend of mine talked and talked to me about voting on the educational question till at last I said, 'I won't vote, because I was brought up to think a great deal of education, and I always snail. So I gave up an engagement to go to the polls and register (and the dress was almost spoiled on account of my mislaid hat trying on, too, because she didn't wait to see whether it fitted or not, but stitched the seams right up, and then I took the greatest pains to go and vote just as they'd told me to, and what do you suppose Henry Pratt told me afterward? My vote was thrown out because I had the frankness to write my full name and address on it!'"

"I told Henry that nothing would surprise me after that—nothing!"

The Goats of Asia Minor.
The goat more than any other factor had assisted the rural inhabitants of Asia Minor to destroy the magnificent forests which once clothed the slopes of Smyrna through to Konja, the ancient capital of Karamania. Not only have the peasants and nomads destroyed the timber for the sake of firewood, but they destroyed it also in order that their goats might obtain suitable pasture. And as goats in their turn prevented the new shoots ever after from replacing the trees which had been cut down.

Death Signs in Holland.
The outward signs on the houses where some one had died in north Holland are original in the extreme. When the dead person is a Protestant, a long black mantle such as the greatcoat of a soldier is put over the grave is hung in the middle of the front door. In the case of a Roman Catholic a tall black cross is placed on the doorstep.

Convalescing
The following was told of the patient of a well-known New York physician:—

The patient, an elderly gentleman, became quite ill while the doctor was absent upon a vacation, the indisposition being the result of too frequent potatoes. A female nurse was at once engaged to care for him in his hotel.

A lady residing in the same hotel one morning inquired concerning his condition of the chambermaid. "Shure, m'ann," replied Maggie. "an' I think he be getting along very well. The nurse was sittin' on his lap this mornin'!"

Exasperating
From the dark kitchen there emanated a series of thumps and angry exclamations. James was looking for the cat.

"Pat!" called the son from the stairway. "Go to bed and let me alone," blurted out Jones. "I've just barked my shins."

"Pat!" insisted Tommy, after a moment's silence. "Well, what is it? Didn't I tell you to keep quiet?"

"I didn't hear your shins bark."

And the next morning Tommy was being pursued by an angry sire with a hard hair brush.

Retained in the Role.

By CARL WILLIAMS.
Copyright, 1908, by Associated Literary Press.

Melrose was agog with excitement. The local billposter was hanging the paper of the Denham Repertoire company for a three night run. And Maggie Denham hailed from Melrose. "Margaret Denham" she was called, but Melrose recognized her.

It was the first time that Melrose called a "real theater troupe" had visited the little town. In their would have meant much, but Maggie in addition created an epoch in town history.

Melrose could not know that she was to be a star only for this brief engagement in Melrose. Maggie had happened to mention that she had been born in Melrose, and the astute manager had changed the name of the company from the Metropolitan to Denham Repertoire company for the three night stay.

He well knew the value of a local name in a small town. Occasionally Maggie had let fall some scrap of information as to her departure from the town that told the rest of the old story of the girl who had run away from home to go upon the stage.

Maggie's story differed from most, for she had succeeded in achieving her ambition. She had become a fairly

HE OLD HE DIDN'T SEE ME LAST NIGHT AS THE ADVERTISER usual player of parts in the smaller

This was her second season with the Metropolitan, and the smiling countenance which Quinlin, the manager, asked her if she felt strong enough to play the star part for three days.

It involved a little extra rehearsal, but Maggie was delighted. She would show Tom Chambers and the rest of Melrose that she had made a success.

Tom came ahead of the rest of Melrose, because there had been a time when they two were almost engaged, and she still thought tenderly of those courtship days.

She looked about eagerly when the company arrived; but, though she was one of the townspeople to have come to the train to stare curiously at Maggie Denham's troupe, Tom was not there.

With a curious sense of blankness Maggie climbed into the ransack but that was to convey the company to the hotel. Her triumphant entrance into her home town had gone for naught just because one man was not there.

She was angry and surprised to realize that she still cared more for Chambers than she had ever admitted when he had tried to win her.

She had not long to wait, however, for information about the recent one. Presently a string of callers came to the hotel and all of the friends of her school days crowded the hotel parlor, all talking at once.

From the babel of voices Maggie gathered that Tom had left town the day before with the evident purpose of avoiding her. The blood throbed in her temples.

It was to give Tom a lesson that she wanted to show to Melrose how well she had succeeded. Now he would not witness her triumph, and she turned strangely depressed until the manager, vexed in the handling of the entire cast of the stage, sensed the situation.

"Anyhow, you can do your best," Quinlin reminded her, "and let the world be a record that he will be proud of."

"And who may 'he be'?" demanded Maggie truculently.

"I don't know," confessed Quinlin promptly, "but there is usually a 'he' somewhere, and since he does not seem to be around I thought you might like my suggestion."

Maggie waved him off with a jesting remark, but her heart was lighter. Here was something that she could do. So it happened that even her fellow players wondered that evening at the audacity with which she played her part.

"You'll land on Broadway yet," they assured her, but even this promise of reaching the goal of all actors did not cheer the girl, and when the performance was over she hurried back to the hotel, only to creep into bed and cry herself to sleep.

On the third and last day of the engagement Tom appeared suddenly in town, and though she could not see him in the badly lighted auditorium that night, Maggie felt that he was there, and she acted with a touch of tenderness that drew a new beauty to a naturally sympathetic role.

John Benjamin, one of the important eastern theatrical men, had stopped over to wait for a train and had drifted into the hotel, where the manager overhauled him with attention. As he watched the girl work he nodded his head.

"I'd like to see your leading woman," Benjamin said to Quinlin. "I can place her in a road company for a year under one of my good stage directors and then bring her into New York."

"Go ahead and steal," invited Quinlin. "She's a little woman, and if you can place her the contract she made with me won't hold her back."

"I'll tell her to write to you," said the manager nodding his thanks, looked at his watch and hurried off to make his train.

Maggie only nodded carelessly, when Quinlin hurried back to the stage door the way to Broadway was open to her at last.

She could not think of business when Tom was out there in the darkness and auditorium watching her. She needed to give all of her attention to her performance, and she played the last act with a rich sincerity that won the audience completely.

Not until the curtain had fallen and the other players crowded around to congratulate her upon the opportunity she had earned did she seem to realize what it all meant, and then she accepted listlessly what the other women of her profession would have given years of their life to attain.

She slipped from the stage door alone to go to the hotel, but as she emerged Tom stepped forward with outstretched hands.

"I had to come to see you," he said bravely. "At first I was afraid I would stay out of town while you were here, but I had to come back, and I'm glad I did."

"I thought that you would be tough and common, Maggie, like the rest, but you can't be that and play as you did tonight. That wasn't acting, and when I saw you as you really are, and not as I thought that you would be, I wanted to get up and shout to you to come right to me and we'd get married, as we used to plan when we were children. Will you come and marry me, Maggie? I've got a line on a house, and you'll never regret it, dear."

"I don't think I will regret it," agreed Maggie happily, "but I didn't think you'd want me, Tom."

"You didn't want me," he reminded her. "I guess I thought pretty much the same. But you—well, when I saw you, I knew you were my Maggie still!"

He clasped her hands, unable to say more, but Maggie smiled. To the Melrose minds all player folk were followers of the devil. Perhaps the ingenious role she had played had won Tom. He wanted for his wife the woman who had played, and she would be easy to continue in that role with Tom as opposite.

She felt that she could continue her success in that part, and so she kissed him before she pushed him gently from her with a whispered command to come to the hotel in the morning. Together they would see Quinlin and secure the release from her contract.

As she entered the hotel the manager was waiting for her. He had taken from his trunk her contract for the season, and this he handed to her.

"This says you free, my girl. You can go to Benjamin and Broadway," he said amiably. "I'm glad that at last the Metropolitan has contributed a real star to Broadway."

"I'm not going to Benjamin," replied Maggie. "I'll play the season out for you if you want me to, but I made a real human bid in the part tonight, and I'm going to keep on playing that. Tom here in Melrose. Give Quinlin, I'm glad he didn't see me last night as the advertiser."

Ice Sport For Danish Children.

In Denmark one of the favorite forms of exercise on the ice is a game wherein the skaters can have their fun and also the tools who prefer to ride upon sleds.

A large pole is fixed upright in the middle of the frozen pond, and a cross-bow is attached, the whole affair being kept from toppling over by means of a large wagon wheel, through whose hub the upright pole is thrust and which lies flat upon the ice. To the end of the longer section of the transverse is a string of sleds is fastened, and then eight or ten of the large lads and lassies begin to skate in a circle, pushing the beam around with their hands, while the little fellows climb on the sleds.

Around and around they go, faster and faster, amid shouts of delight, until the string of sleds is flung out across the ice like a long whip. It often becomes necessary for those who are furnishing the motive power to slacken speed in order to let the coasters get back into a better position, and then the sleds are stretched out and sometimes almost to the banks of the lake—Pathfinder.

Had the Proof.

"I wonder if Jones is married."

"No."

"Did you ask him?"

"I didn't have to. I heard him telling what he would do if any wife of his came out in a divorcee gown."

ORDER OF THE GARTER.

It is the Most Exclusive Order in the World.

The news that the King has been pleased to approve of the Earl of Durham being made a Knight of the Garter in the place of the late Earl of Salisbury, will give a special interest to the following facts on the story of the world's premier honor, and how the greatest of distinctions is conferred.

The origin of this illustrious order has been much disputed, but tradition has it that the choice of the emblem was determined by a trivial accident. It appears that Joan Countess of Salisbury dropped her garter of blue embroidered velvet when dancing with Edward III., and the King, picking it up, hid it around his leg. But, observing the Queen's jealous glances and the significant looks of his courtiers, he returned it to his fair owner with the remark, "Honi soit qui mal y pense!" (Evil be to him who evil thinks), and in a short time they should see that to garner advancement to so high honor and estimation as to account themselves happy to wear it.

The knighthood now consists of the Sovereign—who is invariably the head of the order—five knights, five marshes, and eight earls of the kingdom. These, with the Earl of Durham, make up the total number of twenty-six members, but the reigning monarch has the power to extend the order to foreign sovereigns.

At present time these include twenty-one reigning rulers and six heirs-apparent to European thrones.

The order has for its principal emblem the garter, which formerly was of light blue silk, with the motto set in pearls, rubies, or diamonds. It is now, however, of dark blue velvet, about an inch wide, with a buckle of gold and silver, and the motto in gold letters. It is worn on the left leg a little below the knee, but if the head of the order, the king, wears it on the left arm above the elbow.

The dress of the knights of the order for ceremonial occasions is, as befitting the greatest distinction in the world, most magnificent. The mantle of blue velvet lined with taffeta (the finest white silk), and having the star of the order embroidered on the left breast, a hood of crimson velvet, a surcoat, or coat without sleeves, of the same material and lined like the mantle. A hat of black velvet fastened with diamonds to the lining of white silk, and bearing a plume of white ostrich feathers, having in its center a tuft of black heron's feathers.

Over the mantle is worn the "collar" of blue finest gold, with twenty-six garters—signifying the number of members—enamelled in azure blue, each enclosing a rose "gules" of enamel and having between each star-link a knot and pendant in white enamel. Upon this is suspended the "Great George" of the order, a lion rampant of England on horseback, who, having thrown the dragon on his back, is wearing a white ribbon and star are worn invariably by knights of the order when attending at Court, the "Great George" and collar being only assumed by special order of the Lord Chamberlain, any great ceremony is declared at the King's command to be "Old Day."

OLD ROMAN BATHS.

Very Fine Examples Exist at Wallwick Chester, England.

Of Roman remains there are many examples in the north of England, and one of the best and best preserved is to be found at Wallwick, near Wallack, Cheshire, and the modern name is "Cyl hryn." The words "Cyl hryn" are Welsh to this day for "narrow house," so the link with the past is very clearly seen in this expressive term for "rivereid meadow."

The Roman station at Wallwick covers an area of five and a quarter acres, and are on the usual plan of an oblong, excavations in 1879 brought to light many interesting details, including fragments of gates, quantities of fine plaster and woodwork, and the most important discovery was that of a portion of a bronze tablet which recorded the conferring of the privileges of Roman citizenship and the rights of marriage on certain troops quartered in Britain under Antoninus Pius in the year 145.

Many coins also have been found here, dating from Agricola to Valentinian, and a small altar inscribed with the words "Dibus Veteribus."

The bath in particular is of special interest, differing altogether from that example, for instance, which is one of the treasures of Roman antiquity, and is much larger in construction. It is lined with a red-colored cement, which gives an idea of the bath's original appearance. A breach of the wall there was discovered some time ago an effigy of a woman, which may be taken as a former representative of the Genius of the Tyne.

We had somewhat differently to-day than the Romans, but not more luxuriously or, indeed, frequently.

A Powerful Plea.

A count whose normal position was one of involuntary paid court to the daughter of a millionaire. When the serving her father the impetuous suitor remarked ingenuously, "The assured, sir, that in asking you for your daughter I am guided by selfish or interested motives. All your daughter's marriage portion will go to my creditors!"

A BIRD BUILT BOWER.

New Zealand Feathered Colonies Construct Intricate Houses.

Writing to Professor James Drummond, whose delightful nature notes from New Zealand are well known, Mr. Will Lawson gives some interesting details of Queensland's natural history. Referring to the bower birds, he says that these birds, which are about the size of magpies, dwell in colonies of about a dozen, and each pair has its nest, a most untidy, hastily-thrown-together affair, stuck promiscuously in adjacent trees. The whole energy of the colony is centered in the bower, which each group of birds builds, and which is a marvelous construction. Twigs are laid on the ground, and their ends are curved upwards, then more twigs are woven until a woven tunnel is the result, built so strongly that it is difficult to cause any movement by shaking it. The bower is then furnished with leaves, flowers, pebbles, and shells, and if by chance a silver spoon or ornament falls into their clutches, it gives the birds a great deal of pleasure. The bower is the scene of their courtship, and here the birds play all day long. The male bird, with its brilliant leaves, flowers, pebbles, and shells, and if by chance a silver spoon or ornament falls into their clutches, it gives the birds a great deal of pleasure. The bower is the scene of their courtship, and here the birds play all day long.

The laughing jacks, or "kookaburras," are the most humorous of the birds, and their laughter is a most amusing sound. They are found in colonies, and their laughter is a most amusing sound. They are found in colonies, and their laughter is a most amusing sound.

Another bird whose cry is a combined effort is the stock-whip bird. One of the pair emits a whistle, sharp and shrill, which rises in crescendo, and is then cut short off with a "whit," very like the sound of a wet stock-whip lash. Then the birds utter a series of two quick notes, just as though it said, in startled tones, "What wh!" Closely related to the stock-whip bird is the soldier bird, all uniformed like a red-coat, and the leather-head. The latter has no feathers on its head. These two chatter very long in the scrub—Standard of Empire.

CASTLE UNDER HAMMER.

Famous Fairhill Mansion in England Is to Be Sold.

The beautiful Fairhill mansion and estates, belonging to the Earl of Derby, are to be sold by auction. Situated between Sevenoaks and Tonbridge, the 4,000 acres, or thereabouts, extend from Knole Park to the latter town, and include portions of the parish of Seal, Shipbourne, Hildenborough, Wrotham, Ighiteham (the scene of the terrible legend, "The White Lady"), and Tonbridge. It has been named, containing as it does, some of the most charming architectural treasures of that county. In the sale will be included the famous One Tree Hill, landmark that is famous over the whole of the south of England. The mansion also will be sold, as well as a number of other residences and buildings, and the whole, although apparently not included in the sale, there is one of the most interesting historical edifices of the Ighiteham Mote. An illustration of the beautiful tower over the entrance to the courtyard is printed herewith. The older portions of the building date back to the reign of Edward III.

Originally in the possession of Sir Thomas Chicheley, Ighiteham Mote later passed into the hands of the Haut family, at that period influential Kentish squire, whose representative, Richard Haut, in the fifteenth century, mixed himself in political matters, and lost his estates. The latter was restored to the family by Henry VII. Edward Haut, who received this mark of the Sovereign's good-will, is generally believed to have caused the building of the beautiful tower. Another fine piece of old-fashioned workmanship is a part of the original structure—the great entrance gates and their overcovering, pointed arch.

Heir to £10,000,000.

Considering that he is the son of the millionaire inventor of the "Kaiser" vacuum brake, and heir to £10,000,000, Mr. George Westinghouse's marriage to Miss Evelyn Brockton, the only daughter of a very rich American, is a most interesting event. Mr. Westinghouse, however, has always been characterized by his unassuming manner and lack of "side show." He is a man of twenty-five years of age, and for some twelve of those worked in his father's workshops for $4 an hour. He was a member of the engineering department, and when his time came for controlling something like $9,000,000 he knew exactly what they should do.

In Lilac Days.

By GERTRUDE MANSFIELD.
Copyright, 1908, by Associated Literary Press.

"Oh, what's that?" Alan Berresford, tall, athletic, and looking swinging at a rattling pace down the city streets, swung around as an odor, faint, fragrant, delicious, assailed his nostrils. "Lilacs, by Jupiter!"

Lilacs, in truth. The street stand at the corner brimmed over with these great purple spraying plumes of sweetness among their cool, green, smooth, heart shaped leaves.

"Lilacs, sir?" The swarthy skinned young vendor evidently expected a liberal purchaser.

"Yes—no; wait a minute!" And this specious man of affairs, whose diamond could shake the board of trade building over on La Salle street to its foundations, stood looking absently at the flowers, lost in retrospection.

Lilacs! He saw all at once the quaint house in a pretty, peaceful country town. He saw, too, the overgrown old garden where the peonies and gooseberries interlaced silken stems and briery branches, and farther back the orchard came gently dimpling down, a secluded green stretch of pathway. At either side a row of lilac bushes grew higher than a man's head—a way of bloom and beauty, of overwhelming fragrance. Lilac line they called it. And when the moon rose and set shifting shadows about the place it was a luminous mosaic of morning leaves and silvery lights where he and Elsie walked.

"Lilacs, sir?" Berresford pulled himself together with a start. Ah, that seemed so long ago! Had he been letting himself drift into a sentimental dream—here, in broad daylight, one of the most crowded streets of a great city? He glanced around half guiltily.

Then, with a little cynical smile and shrug of his shoulders, he turned to the Greek flower seller. "Send those to my hotel." He motioned to a great earthen jar full of the beautiful blossoms. He penciled name and number on his business card and handed it to the man with a nod.

Then, receiving his change, he walked on, the scent of the lilacs still stealing to perfume the surging city street.

"Hello, Berresford!" And this time, although he did not hear, in the place of blare and bustle his thoughts had gone astray. He was no longer walking down the street of a western metropolis.

He was walking with a girl in a gown of palest rose and green through the changeable lights and shadows that flickered over Lilac lane.

"Hold on, Alan! What is the matter with you? You'll get run over the first thing you know! Can't you speak to an old friend?"

Berresford swung around. An old friend! All the dreaminess went out of his eyes. His jaws were set—hard. A Julia friend—one who could and would—

"Berresford!" And this time, now, now, in this crowded city street he should loom up—he who had been responsible for such disillusion, such sorrow, such loneliness!

"Berresford!" he cried in scorn. "How dare you speak to me?"

Amusement was apparent on the face of the man who had addressed him. "Berresford, here you come clean and daft? Why should I not speak to you?"

We who sat side by side in the same school, went swimming in the same creek, went sweatbathing together!

Berresford, the contrasted himself, with an effort. Men were passing whom he knew—whose salutations, deferential and admiring, he mechanically acknowledged. The necessity for self control was obvious. "We must not attract attention," he said. "Let us walk on."

And walk on in silence they did. It was not until they had gone several blocks that Berresford could control himself sufficiently to explain his repudiation of Ronald Derwin. "It is a queer coincidence," he said, "that you should have spoken to me just when I was dreaming of the little old town in which I was brought up. He had himself well in hand now that he spoke almost dreamily."

"Of course I was thinking most of the lilacs," where both used to visit. You probably know that I was engaged to Elsie Rivers when that fortune—which is the cornerstone of my wealth today—was lost, and I was obliged to go abroad to claim it."

"The other gave a startled glance. 'No; I never knew that!' he said."

Berresford pressed his lips tightly together before he spoke again. "It was midwinter when I left—springtime when I returned. And, of course, I went at once to our old home town. Elsie was out, her mother said, somewhere abroad. I went immediately to our old trying place in Lilac lane. There was the same familiar walk, all odorous with bloom and the moonlight falling in a thousand shifting lights and shadows, just as I always loved to remember."

His voice broke curiously. His companion, a slight, dark man, younger than he, looked at him with frank anxiety in his eyes.

"She was there," went on Berresford. "So was a man whose arm encircled her as they walked. Her head almost touched his shoulder. Her drooping face I could not see distinctly, but the height and walk were those of Elsie, whom I had called my Elsie. I believe, with a sudden chill change of tone, 'that is all I need explain, Derwin!'"

"No," said Derwin quietly. "It isn't quite all. Who was her escort? Who was the man?"

A great wrath shone Berresford from his eyes. He whirled around upon his companion, white to the lips. "You!" he cried. "You, Ronald Derwin! You were the man!"

Derwin spoke in a level and commanding voice. "Come! Let us walk still a little farther. Neither you nor I can afford to leave public comment on the hope to prove to you that you have been mistaken."

Startled, but incredulous, Berresford accepted the suggestion. "What made you turn, like another Enoch Arden, and leave the place?" Derwin asked.

Because, being disappointed in my absence, I was another Enoch Arden," came the reply, passionately spoken.

"Listen. After you went abroad Elsie's cousin came to live with her. The cousin was a girl of great and genteel appearance, although when considered together they do not look alike. I fell in love with Laura. She has been my wife for three years, and a mighty sweet wife she is. Will you dine with us tonight, Berresford?"

Berresford flushed and trembled like a girl. "It was she—not Elsie—that I saw with you?"

"Assuredly, as you might have discovered had you been less impulsive in your youth. The girl is the same as I saw her. We'll expect you at 6."

"No, no; I must go at once to Elsie, if she will listen, if she will forgive me. But there may now be some other person, some other claim."

"There isn't any one but you. I don't think there ever would or will be. But come to dinner at 6, as I said. Elsie is just now waiting at our home."

"What?" shouted Berresford. "Give me that card with your address—quick! Hi, hello! Don't go if you make me wait! Wait until 6, indeed. Well, I guess not!"

Then he was being driven swiftly southward, and for him all the world—the gracious, serene, delicious, springtime world—was full of the waving of lilac plumes, the prescient fragrance of lilac blossoms.

Plateau Plains of the West.

A phenomenal feature of the desert plains is the plateau plain. Measles are called in the southwestern United States and Mexico. These mesas, as the Spanish name signifies, are extensive, flat topped, table-like areas rising abruptly from the general plain to heights of from 100 or 200 feet to 1,000 feet or more. The mesa de Mesa de Maya, in northeastern New Mexico, is 3,500 feet above the next lower plain. The surface of the plateau plain is usually found to be composed of some hard rock layer, as in the case of the vast Llano Estacado, or "walled plains," or staked plains, as it is called by the Texans, or is made up of an extensive lava flow, as, for example, the Mesa de Maya, the Otero mesa and the majority of the plains of this kind. The surface beneath the lava flows of the mesa is a series of terraces, or on the levelled edges of the strata. The plateau plain thus represents a former position of the general plains level. It is the best example of circumscribed elevation, and is a most interesting and popular scientific study.

Part of the Game.

"I come," said the great actress to the modest actress. "To change you to get a divorce for me."

"I suppose you have a good case," said the lawyer.

"A perfect one," responded the actress.

"And want it got as quietly as possible," said the lawyer.

"Quietly as possible! I should say so. What is the use of getting a divorce, I'd like to know, if there is to be no advertising in it?"

Practical Superstition.

"Heard a dog howling all night."

"It means a sudden death."

"I didn't know you were superstitious."

Yes, it was the finish of the block that Berresford could control

Some Remarkable Facts

Fine Artistic Printing

If you were ill and sent for a doctor wouldn't you have enough confidence in him to follow his instructions? Why, of course, any sane person would because he is a specialist and thoroughly understands your needs and will recommend what he knows to be best for you.

Will you not let this same reasoning apply to your needs in office and business stationery. The people that have seen our work say that we are specialists in this line. If you will put your work into our hands we will give you the best treatment possible. Our Job Work is the result of a careful study in the printing and advertising art worked out by thoroughly competent artists, with the latest styles of type and modern machinery to help them.
